

BEGINNING DAY 2021

5. An incessant desire for the impossible

“And how can it be—
I say to myself, watching life passing toward the beach—, that not- withstanding the merciless devastations that time inflicts on us there is not the slightest attenuation not a second’s truce
in this incessant dream of the impossible.”
(Karmelo Iribarren, Verano cruel)

“To be able to close his heart in his ribcage, to keep his heartbeat under control. To be able to love and despise with less noise, in silence. He never was.”
(Fátima Ruiz, El Mundo, June 10, 2021)

Often the impetus of life we find ourselves in scares us, because we do not know how to deal with it, it makes us feel “mistaken”. But there is not a second’s truce in our thirst for happiness, our desire for the impossible to begin to unravel ...

What sort of feeling did the Beginning Day arise in you?
